SUMMARY

Full stack engineer and one of the founders of Bronix, where I spent five years shipping more than ten consumer products from first commit to launch. I work across the entire web stack, building React and Next.js frontends on top of Node.js, Go, and Python services with Firebase or Supabase behind them. I have taken enterprise scale platforms to production and built practical AI features into apps people use every day. I move quickly, own what I build, and would rather ship something real than polish something forever.
